Dear Henry,

I tried to do you a favor and it backfired. I'm sorry it delays the book. Because of the past and because you write I found a few minutes and packaged and mailed the book prior to the arrival of your check and label. I erred in addressing it and your post office apparently could not take the time to do any checking.

I send it as evidence of good faith. If the book is not in good shape I'll replace it.

Phlebitis has slowed me down much. I do the packaging during the periods I have to keep my legs raised, with a blanket accross them using them as a worktable. The day I packaged the enclosed I had the extra time. My purpose was to extend a courtesy. I'm sorry it did not work out that way. I'll try to speed this by special handling.

Sincerely,
